TASK Project Reference

STEWARTS LAW

This project continues our work on the prestigious new offices of Stewarts Law in central London. It was a privilege to contribute to a scheme of this calibre, combining functionality, flexibility, and character, delivered in close collaboration with the exceptional furniture consultants at Spacecraft.

Working alongside the Spacecraft team, we provided a thoughtfully curated range of sit-stand workstations, paired with bespoke dividing screens. These ergonomic desks, enhanced with tailored detailing, were designed to meet the client's requirements while adding a distinct sense of identity to the space. We also installed a selection of lockers to support a clean, organised, and efficient working environment. Planters and greenery were introduced to soften the overall aesthetic and create a calmer, more inviting workplace.

Expertly managed and seamlessly delivered by Spacecraft, the project was executed with precision and care. It stands as a strong example of what Task Systems can deliver.

AG BARR

TASK Project Reference

AG BARR

The hardest thing to get right in a workplace isn't the layout or the lighting, it's the feeling. Kailee Lane at Curo Workspace got it right for AG Barr's new offices, and we were glad to play our part in it.

AG Barr's new workspace feels less like a corporate fit-out and more like a place with a point of view. Every zone was considered on its own terms and the furniture was chosen to match.

In the boardroom, the Work walnut table and ICF's Valea Soft chairs in cognac leather create a room that gets the tone right without announcing it. Blue curtains filter the light and define the space without closing it off.

The Work Polo table with a stunning plant at its centre anchors the open-plan floor; part focal point, part casual meeting spot that people naturally gravitate to.

The breakout areas bring a different energy: Woody chairs in oak frames, green Mila banquette seating, Everyday Collection pieces that give each zone its own character while keeping the floor reading as one coherent space.

At the entrance, the Cube sofa and Hudson armchair sit among lush greenery, an arrival moment that tells you immediately this isn't a standard office.

The result speaks for itself - good design paired with the right furniture shapes how people move through a space, often without them even noticing. Nothing is there for show. Everything is there because it works.

VEOLIA UK

Project Case Study

VEOLIA UK

This exceptional project for Veolia is the result of a close collaboration between TASK and Kailee Lane, Creative Director at Curo Workspace.

The design moves beyond the traditional office to create a vibrant destination centred on movement and connection, balancing high-end aesthetics with technical performance.

As a key furniture supplier, TASK provided a curated selection of pieces that form the project's functional foundation. Our Work tables were selected for the meeting rooms, offering a clean, professional setting that pairs perfectly with the organic silhouette of the Olivia chairs. These refined spaces are contrasted by "punchy," vibrant ICF Stick chairs in bold, colourful finishes, which inject personality and energy into the collaborative zones.

The open-plan areas are anchored by our signature Team workstations, providing a minimalist aesthetic and integrated power management that allows Curo's architecture to remain the focus. To support agile working, we integrated Cube breakout booths and high-performance AR meeting pods that act as private spaces for deep focus. The final result is a high energy, visionary environment where functionality and curated, impactful design work in total harmony.
